

How do we become people who do something about injustice?*9 Observations:

1. Injustice begins with self-centeredness (2)
2. Injustice grows when we keep the wrong company (3-5)
3. Injustice grows when we fail to exercise discernment (6-7)
4. Injustice grows when victims are the only ones speaking the truth (12-13)
5. Injustice grows because we believe the wrong things about power (14)
6. Injustice creates unreasonable hatred in the one who performs it (15-17)
7. Injustice steals some valuable aspect of a person's image bearing nature. (18-19)
8. Injustice requires more than feeling bad. (21)
9. Failure to deal with injustice leads to more injustice (21-29)

Questions for Discussion/Reflection:

Reread 2 Samuel 13:1-33

- What stood out to you in the text and the sermon? Why?
- Where and how have you encountered injustice?
- What is your natural reaction to discussing injustice? Why do you think this is the case?
- Has God put you in a position to do something about an injustice that you are aware of? What is He inviting you to do?
- When you think about injustice in our cultural context what issues do you think of and why? How can you engage this broader cultural issue of injustice practically?
- How does it help to know that God has, is, and will do something about all injustice...when you're a victim? When you're the perpetrator? When you're a witness?
